

“The free advice to us has been well received, it has given us a better understanding of what applies to us and how we, ourselves can manage it in order to meet compliance and avoid notices and penalties. We had increased our staff, and needed to complete documented risk assessments – with a little time and the right advice and guidance we have now managed to complete these ourselves with confidence. We were shocked to learn how much money we have saved by learning and doing it ourselves”

Providing the advice and guidance local businesses want

This free advice and guidance has enabled me to understand legally required processes and complete risk assessments that are tailored specific to the size and nature of my business. I have also introduced staff training records, carried out staff training for the safe use of machinery. Now that I have my basic foundations in place, I feel more confident to continue to manage it in relation to how my business develops in the future.

I think the free advice service that the Council provides is of great benefit to us, the smaller businesses across the district especially in the way that it can be delivered to your doorstep and fit in time-wise with your quiet times of trade.

Julian Hobson from the Kegworth Butcher

“I accessed the free service and used the advice as refresher training for myself in order to complete risk assessments and develop a health and safety management system for my business – I had covered most of the issues at college a few years ago, but had become rusty in applying my knowledge, and had not kept up to date with changes to regulations and legislation”
